GIRLS PLUNGED INTO MILL RACE

Blind Horse Takes them in Buggy over Fifteen Foot Embankment. Held by Buggy until Men Come to their Rescue.

Thrown into the tail race of a county mill and held there by an overturned buggy until they were released by several men, Miss Edna Gardner and Miss Alice Gardner, of Latimore township, had a very narrow escape from death.

The young women are daughters of Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Gardner and had gone to Group's mill about six o'clock in the evening to transact some business. Failing to see anybody about, they rang the bell at the lower part of the mill to call one of the men. They were driving a blind horse and the animal, suddenly startled, jumped over an embankment and fell into the tail race a distance of possibly fifteen feet.

The buggy overturned with the young women and they were pinned beneath it. Fortunately the water was not deep and they were not in any immediate danger of drowning. The noise of the buggy going over the bank and the screams of the women brought a number of men to the place. Headed by William Hoopert, they succeeded in getting them out.

Miss Alice Gardner received some bruises but her sister escaped without a scratch. The horse was not seriously hurt and the buggy escaped with comparatively little damage.

MISSED GOOD CHANCE

Should Have Gotten Minister into Highway Film.

When the Lincoln Highway moving picture people were in Adams county they went out to the Studebaker home and took some views for the Studebaker Automobile Company. The camera men missed a fine chance to secure a film of unusual interest, thinks the York Springs Comet, by not getting Rev. L. M. Gardner, of York Springs, to go out and pose at the old Studebaker home. George Gardner, father of the minister, and Peter Studebaker, father of the famous Studebaker brothers, started the wagon making business at that place over four score years ago. George Gardner was exceptionally handy with the saw and plane and worked out the work for the wagons which Studebaker shod with iron work and bolts made on his little forge. Both men resided in the same house and Rev. Mr. Gardner and Clem. Studebaker were rocked in the same cradle.

MOTORISTS HERE

Waynesboro People Come here to Spend Day on Field.

The Waynesboro Motor Club conducted a publicity run to Gettysburg to-day and about fifty persons from that town enjoyed the trip here and over the battlefield. They traveled on regular schedule and, after several hours on the field, enjoyed a picnic luncheon at Spangler's Spring. The return is being made by way of Chambersburg. The party included a number of well known Waynesboro people who called on Gettysburg friends before the return was started. A repair car accompanied the run.

Funeral will be Held here on Saturday Morning.

Charles A. Weirick, for a number of years engaged in the manufacture of cigars here, died at his home on Breckenridge street Wednesday afternoon from tuberculosis aged 50 years.

He is a member of the Sacred Heart Beneficial Society of Conewago Chapel, and also of St. Francis Xavier Beneficial Society of Gettysburg.

He leaves one sister, Miss Elizabeth Weirick.

MRS. MARY E. BURNITE

AFTER DOGS THAT CHASE THE GAME

New Protector for this County Gets Instructions on how to Proceed. Would Safeguard Protected Birds and Animals.

William C. Bowman, newly appointed game warden of Adams county, has been instructed by the state game commissioners of Pennsylvania to strictly enforce the law relating to the trailing of game quadrupeds and game birds by dogs during the closed season.

The newly amended law provides that any dog pursuing or tracking game quadrupeds, game birds or other wild birds, protected by law, during the closed season, may be regarded as a public nuisance and killed by owner, lessee or any employee or owner or lessee of land whereon it is found or by game-protector, deputy game-protector, game warden, forestry warden, or any other officer of the commonwealth whose duty it is to enforce the game laws.

If a dog found pursuing game out of season wears a collar having attached thereto a metallic tag or plate, upon which shall be plainly inscribed in English the name and address of owner of such dog, it may be killed by those authorized only after the owner has been notified in writing to take means to prevent his dog from pursuit or tracking of game out of season.

Dogs when accompanied by and under control of their masters, may be trained upon any of the living wild game or birds of this state, excepting elk and deer and fawn, from the first day of September to the first day of March, next following, so long as no injury is inflicted on game animals or birds.

FOR ANNUAL REUNION

Governor Brumbaugh will be Asked to Make Address.

The executive committee in charge of the sixth annual reunion of the Odd Fellows of Pennsylvania, Maryland, District of Columbia, Virginia and West Virginia, to be held at Pen Mar, Thursday, August 5, met in Hagerstown, and reorganized for this year.

There came from the Maryland and Virginia men a request that Governor M. G. Brumbaugh be asked to deliver the oration. The people of their states, they said, are very much impressed by Pennsylvania's chief executive.

United States Senator Claude A. Swanson, Virginia, will be invited to serve as presiding officer.

ARGUMENT SETTLED

Bass Season Opens Same Date this Year.

Doubts of local fishermen concerning the effect of the new fish code of the state on the opening of bass season this month are set at rest by a communication from N. R. Buller, state commissioner of fisheries. This letter in effect states that while the new code sets the opening date a day later than June 15, which it has been for a number of years, the change cannot become effective until after the opening date this year which, consequently will be next Tuesday.

TO REPLACE TABLETS

Emmitsburg Citizens to Confer with Park Commission.

The Emmitsburg Civic League has taken up with the National Park Commission the matter of replacing the two tablets in the Emmitsburg Square which were broken some time ago by runaway teams. The Maryland citizens have agreed to see that proper care is given the tablets if they are replaced, and J. Stewart Annan and Sterling Galt have been named as a committee to confer with Colonel John P. Nicholson in the matter.

Sixteen members of the Ninth Pennsylvania Cavalry, which is now holding its annual reunion here, died during the past year. The veterans have their headquarters at the City Hotel, spent part of to-day on the battlefield, and held their business meeting this afternoon.

Among other business transacted was the passing of a motion asking that the regiment be allowed a place in the parade to be held in Washington in September, to be made up of all those who participated in the grand review in 1865. The 9th Cavalry was the only Pennsylvania regiment not in the review at that time, being in the South when it took place.

SEE ANOTHER BIG WHEAT CROP

Cold Weather Has not Done Serious Damage According to Official Bulletin. What the Indications are Found Elsewhere.

Prospects of a billion bushel wheat crop were brightened during the last week by favorable weather for both winter and spring wheat, according to the national weather and crop bulletin. Since the government's June 1 canvass, upon which the crop reporting board predicted a 950,000,000 bushel wheat crop, which, with good growing weather might reach a billion bushels, winter wheat is said to have generally improved, while spring wheat made satisfactory progress.

"Despite further rains in some of the important winter wheat states," says the crop bulletin, "the wheat crop appears not to have suffered to any extent, save from flooding and too rank growth in limited areas. Over the remaining districts wheat generally improved during the week and the continued wet and cool weather appears to have still further reduced the opportunity for damage by insect pests. Harvesting is under way in the southern limits of the belt, and the crop is heading satisfactorily further north and in the Far West, where it is reported as being in splendid condition.

"Cool weather prevailed in the principal spring wheat states, but the soil moisture continues sufficient and the crop made satisfactory progress, although warmer weather would be beneficial.

COLT CAUSES TROUBLE

Forester Gets Hurt Three Ways; Serious.

James Stine, employed by the state forestry department at Big Flat, was severely injured Monday when he attempted to mount a young colt he was riding. Stine had been cutting out fire lanes with a force of men, under the supervision of Ranger McElwee at Flat Rock.

As Stine was about to get on the animal's back, it became frightened by the jangling of kitchen utensils fastened on the saddle and threw Stine to the ground.

Before Stine had recovered himself the alarmed animal stepped with a fore-foot on the prostrate man's head. An axe Stine had been carrying struck him on the other side of his head and made an ugly gash.

He was taken to his home where he is slowly improving from his serious injuries.

PLANK RELEASES LEFTY RUDOLPH

Only Three Men now on Patriots' Pitching Staff and they are not in Condition for Work. Problem Causing Much Worry.

Pitcher Rudolph is the latest one of the Patriots to fall before the slashing being done by Manager Plank to bring the number within the salary limit and allow the working of the college boys who were signed early in the season. Rudolph came back to Gettysburg to-day and will go from here to the western part of the State where he has secured a position with a small town team at a salary, he says, considerably in advance of that which he was getting here.

Rudolph at no time showed any particular form and he was held in the hope that he could produce more than he had developed during the earlier days. He did not bat well and proved a failure at pitching so that there was no reason to keep him. Bream is now in left field, though his being retained there will depend on his work at the bat, in which he is not so strong as during the early part of last year. With the arrival of Miller, the Bucknell star, next week it is believed that Bream will have his hands full in taking care of his job.

With the dismissal of Rudolph, the Patriots are left with only three pitchers, Stair who is said to be anything but in good physical trim, Lower whose arm is not in shape for work, and Howard who needs a rest badly. This morning the pitcher from Mt. St. Mary's who played here on Monday went to Hagerstown to report to Plank for a try-out and several other pitchers are in prospect to strengthen this department of the game.

Plank himself went into the box during the latter part of Wednesday's game. There are many fans here who would like to see Ira start a game and take it the whole way through, believing that he would be a strong acquisition to the staff of mound artists.

Gettysburg is still only a half game behind second place and, for the first ten days, this is considered remarkably good.

WILSON DECLINED TO YIELD

Says U. S. Course in Lusitania Case
Is Against Principles of Peace
Treaties to Which Germany Subscribed.

Washington, June 10.—William Jennings Bryan's personal statement on the reasons for his resignation of the office of secretary of state contend that the difficulties between Germany and the United States should be investigated by an international commission, and that Americans should be warned to keep off belligerent ships or those carrying ammunition through the danger zone.

Mr. Bryan's statement follows: "My reason for resigning is clearly stated in my letter of resignation, namely, that I may employ as a private citizen, the means which the president does not feel at liberty to employ. I honor him for doing what he believes to be right, and I am sure that he desires, as I do, to find a peaceful solution of the problem which has been created by the action of the submarines."

"Two of the points on which we differ, each conscientious in his conviction, are: "First, as to the suggestion of investigation by an international commission, and,

"Second, as to warning Americans against traveling on belligerent ships or with cargoes of ammunition."

"I believe this nation should frankly state to Germany that we are willing to apply in this case the principle which we are bound by treaty to apply to disputes between the United States and thirty countries with which we have made treaties."

"These treaties provide for investigation of all disputes of every character and nature."

"Negotiated under this administration, they make war practically impossible between this country and these governments representing nearly three-fourths of all the people of the world."

"Among the nations with which we have these treaties are Great Britain, France and Russia. No matter what disputes may arise between us and these treaty nations, we agree that there shall be no declaration and no commencement of hostilities until the matters in dispute have been investigated by an international commission, and a year's time is allowed for investigation and report."

Berlin Accepted Principle.

"This plan was offered to all the nations without any exceptions what ever, and Germany was one of the nations that accepted the principle. Being the twelfth, I think, to accept. No treaty was actually entered into with Germany, but I cannot see that that should stand in the way of both nations endorsing the principle. I do not know whether Germany would accept the offer, but our country should, in my judgment, make the offer."

"Such an offer, if accepted, would at once relieve the tension and silence all the tongues who are demanding war. Germany has always been a friendly nation, and a great many of our people are of German ancestry. Why should we not deal with Germany according to this plan to which the nation has pledged its support?"

"The second point of difference is as to the ships which should be put under investigation by an international commission on belligerent ships or with cargoes of ammunition."

"Why should an American citizen be permitted to travel on a belligerent ship, when he knows that the ship will pass through a danger zone?"

"The question is not whether an American citizen has a right, under international law, to travel on a belligerent ship. The question is whether he ought not, out of consideration for his country, if not for his own safety, to avoid danger when avoidance is possible."

"It is a very one-sided citizenship that compels a government to go to war over a citizen's rights, and yet relieves that government of all obligations to consider his nation's welfare."

"I do not know just how far the president can legally go in actually preventing Americans from traveling on belligerent ships, but I believe the government should go as far as it can, and that in case of doubt, it should give the benefit of the doubt to the government."

Should Warn Citizens.

"Not even if the government could not legally prevent citizens from traveling on belligerent ships, it could, and in my judgment, should, earnestly advise American citizens not to risk themselves or the peace of their country, and I have no doubt that these warnings would be heeded."

"President Taft advised Americans to leave Mexico when insurrection broke out there, and President Wilson has repeated the advice. This advice, in my judgment, was eminently wise, and I think the same course should be followed in regard to warning Americans to keep off vessels subject to attack."

"I think, too, that American passenger ships should be prohibited from carrying ammunition. The lives of passengers ought not to be endangered by cargoes of ammunition whether that danger comes from possible explosions within or from possible attacks from without."

"Passengers and ammunition should not travel together. The attempt to prevent American citizens from incurring these risks is entirely consistent with the effort which our government is making to prevent attacks from submarines."

"The use of one remedy does not exclude the use of the other. The most familiar illustration is to be found in the action taken by municipal authorities during a riot. It is the duty of the mayor to suppress the mob and to prevent violence, but he does not hesitate to warn citizens to keep off the streets during the riots."

"He does not question their right to use the streets, but for their own protection and in the interest of order he warns them not to incur the risks involved in going upon the streets when men are shooting at each other."

Mr. Wilson Will Not Yield.

"The president does not feel just fed in taking the action above stated. That is, he does not feel justified, first, in suggesting the submission of the controversy to investigation, or second, in warning the people not to incur the extra hazards in traveling on belligerent ships or on ships carrying ammunition.

"And he may be right in the position he has taken, but as a private citizen I am free to urge both these propositions and to call public attention to these remedies in the hope of securing such an expression of public sentiment as will support the president in employing these remedies, if in the future, he finds it consistent with his sense of duty to favor them."

NOTE ON LUSITANIA SENT TO BERLIN

Demands Assurance of Safety
For American Lives.

Washington, June 10.—The American note to Germany, which caused the cabinet crisis culminating in Secretary Bryan's resignation, is on its way to Berlin.

The note will be given out for publication in the morning papers of Friday. Simultaneously, Mr. Bryan's resignation as secretary of state took effect.

Officials estimated that the note was between 1500 and 2000 words long.

The note to which Secretary Bryan was unable to subscribe firmly restates the position of the United States, reiterates President Wilson's previous demands and calls upon Germany for a prompt expression as to whether or not she intends to abide by the principles of international law and humanity.

There was a well defined trend of opinion in official quarters that the resignation of Mr. Bryan would go far toward impressing Germany with the earnest intention of the United States to insist on its rights.

It is understood that the United States, from time to time, has received authoritative information that high German officials believed the administration was committed to a policy of uninterrupted peace and did not intend at any time or under any circumstances to go to war.

Mr. Bryan's resignation, many officials believe, would remove all doubts in Berlin, and if Germany sincerely desires to avert war, would arrange for a way out of the problem that has arisen which could honorably be accepted by the United States.

BRYAN TO BE CANDIDATE

Will Run For Presidency on Peace and Prohibition Platform.

Washington, June 10.—A member of the national Republican committee made this statement here:

"William J. Bryan will be a candidate for the presidency in 1916 on a platform of prohibition, peace and woman suffrage."

"This has been evident for some time to close observers. The questions of prohibition and woman suffrage, which have been carefully avoided by President Wilson, Bryan has rushed in and endorsed wholeheartedly."

"The break with President Wilson would have come anyhow. It was only a matter of time. Bryan will be the candidate of the Prohibition party."

Germans Evacuate French Town.

London, June 10. — Neuville St. Vaast, a town north of Arras, for which the French have been fiercely fighting for more than a fortnight, has been evacuated by the Germans. It was admitted in the official statement given out by the German war office. Neuville St. Vaast is an important acquisition for the French forces that are trying to drive the Germans from their defenses known as "the labyrinth," southeast of Neuville.

PRESSING THEIR OFFENSIVE

Petrograd Reports Stubborn Fighting
In Galicia—Germans Use Poisonous Gas North of Rawa.

Cologne, Germany, June 10.—A dispatch from the Austrian press headquarters on the eastern front states that the Russian army in Bukovina, which had been strengthened by portions of the detachments already defeated at Kalusz, eastern Galicia, has been cut off from the middle Galician forces of the Russians and is being driven back eastward.

General Baitin's left wing is prosecuting a violent offensive movement. The advance of the armies of Generals Linsingen, Saurmay and Hoffman is proceeding by forced marches.

Russians Make Stand at Shavli.

Petrograd, June 10.—An official announcement was given out here. It reads as follows:

"In the Shavli district, province of Kovno, the enemy received reinforcements, changed his front and made an obstinate attack in the direction of Double. On Monday our troops had left Double and occupied positions in front of Shavli. On the lower Dubyza our advance has been satisfactory."

"On the left bank of the Vistula, north of Rawa, the Germans, taking advantage of a favorable wind, attempted to make use of poisonous gases."

"In Galicia there has been stubborn fighting on the left bank of the Wisznia river. On June 6 the enemy succeeded in forcing back our troops, but the Russians counter attacked and captured 2000 prisoners within twenty-four hours."

"On the Dnieper front there was fighting on June 5 and 7. Between the rivers Tsimenitz and Loukwa the attacks upon the Russian right, from Ugarsburg, were without result. In this fighting the Russians at Zhidchen captured 300 prisoners, six of whom were officers, and two Maxim guns."

"On the left bank of the Dnieper the enemy has increased his forces at Zhouzono. On the right bank of this river the Germans fell into a trap near Siwka. Two hundred of them were killed in a bayonet charge."

The Army Messenger, referring to the naval engagement on June 5, in the Baltic sea, off the Gulf of Riga, says that Russian submarines engaged no fewer than ten German warships which were attempting a sortie into the Baltic. The explosions on board some of these vessels lead to the belief that damage was done by the underwater boats."

A German second class cruiser, the newspaper adds, was struck by a mine on June 4. She did not sink, but was towed into Libau. A German steamer called the Hindenburg was blown up by striking a Russian mine."

While the total of the British forces in the field has never been officially stated, it has been estimated at about 750,000 men.

PENNSY GIVES OUT MORE RAIL ORDERS

Awards Contracts Worth $4,665,000 to Steel Cos.

Philadelphia, June 10.—Rail orders which will call for the expenditure of $4,665,000, and which will be distributed among five steel companies, were awarded by the Pennsylvania railroad.

The orders are for 155,500 tons of rails, of which 118,000 tons are to be 100-pound rails and 37,500 tons are to be 125-pound rails.

Earlier in the year the Pennsylvania placed orders for 12,000 tons, so that the total orders for the year are 167,500 tons for the lines east and west, and the cost $5,025,000.

In January last the management announced that this year's requirements would approximate 170,000 tons, so that the company has not stinted itself in actually placing orders.

Based upon the awards of recent years, somewhat less than one-half of the rail order has gone to the United States Steel corporation, while an order for a similar amount has been divided between the Cambria Steel and Pennsylvania Steel, with a small balance being shared by Lackawanna Steel and Bethlehem Steel.

MUST SOON STOP THE HUSTLERS

Frederick's Lead, if Increased, is Likely to Make League Uninteresting. Other Teams Hot after them. Gettysburg Loses.

Who is going to stop Frederick? That is the question that is agitating fans not only in Gettysburg but all over the Blue Ridge circuit. The Marylanders have lost only one game out of nine played and the nearest teams to it have lost no less than five each. Not one of them seems to be able to conquer the "Hustlers" and there are many who fear the race may become one-sided.

Others, who say they know a little more about Frederick's real strength, declare the break is sure to come and that the Fritchieites are about due now for several sound trouncings. Hanover and Gettysburg both met defeat again on Wednesday while Frederick was putting one over on Chambersburg. Martinsburg took another game, to the delight of Gettysburg's friendly fans.

But about our own game. An effort was made to forget it but the score of Hagerstown 8, Gettysburg 1 remains to be explained. It was this way. Topsy Hoar, who was hurried to the scene to relieve Gettysburg's overworked and crippled pitchers, was "easy fruit," as a former executive of the town would express it, and he was relieved by Rudolph in the fifth after eight hits had been made off his delivery. Rudolph again failed to make good and Ira Plank went in at the seventh to stem the tide. Thirteen hits was made off the three pitchers.

All this time Gettysburg had amassed a grand total of three hits, two of which were tallied by Mahaffie and one by Jarosick. Mahaffie had a three bagger and covered short stop—his old position before coming to Gettysburg—in satisfactory shape. Gettysburg 0 0 0 1 0 0 0 0 1-3-2 Hagerstown 3 0 0 2 2 0 1 0 x-8-13-2

SPEED OF ALLIES DARDANELLES

Getting Foothold on Gallipoli Under Fierce Fire Took Forty Hours Instead of Seven Days.

A GRAPHIC and stirring description of the landing of the allied army at the Dardanelles is given in a dispatch from Athens by an American war correspondent who has seen the reports of the foreign military observers accompanying the British and French forces. The general staff of the Greek army, he says, regards the achievement as one of the most remarkable operations of the war. The troops accomplished their landing in forty hours, forcing their way despite heavy losses under hot fire, while thousands struggled in the glare of searchlights and amid a terrific cannonade to put the supplies ashore.

In the reports of the military attaches two features are mentioned as standing out—the careful, systematic and detailed preparation, and then the surprising speed with which the disembarkation was carried out and the foothold on the soil seized.

The plan of action was arranged eight weeks before at a series of military conferences in London, Paris and Malta. Every detail of it went through without a hitch. Concentration of troops and supplies began immediately. Thousands of men left England secretly under cover of darkness, crossed the English channel and proceeded to Marseilles to embark on transports for Egypt.

Army Silently Formed.

At the same time those French troops that could be spared from Europe also were transported to the land of the Nile. Australian and New Zealand contingents reached Egypt through the Suez canal. Finally there were available more than 110,000 British troops, including Australians, New Zealanders and Indians, and about 90,000 French soldiers, including Algerians.

Simultaneously a monster staff was ransacking both countries for supplies. Every preparation was made for maintaining a great army for a long time on foreign soil.

Alexandria was the first advanced base. It is 700 miles from the Dardanelles. A nearer base was absolutely necessary. Consequently the British fleet suddenly occupied the islands of Mudros, Tenedos and Imbros. Tenedos is only twelve miles from Kum Kale and Sided Bahir.

England asserts a right of occupation. Greece took the islands from the Turks in the first Balkan war. The London conference stipulated that the islands should be returned to Turkey. Turkey refused to sign the treaty, and then Greece consequently continued to occupy the islands. There was a mild Greek protest when the British took possession, but it was over come. England promised to give back the islands at the end of the war and even yet the civil administration remains Greek.

Tenedos as Supply Depot.

A fleet of cargo boats freighted to the islands huge quantities of food, scores of heavy siege guns and thousands of boxes of ammunition. Although most of the supplies destined for the use of the troops after they landed in Turkey were taken to the islands of Tenedos and Mudros, the troops themselves remained in Egypt until the final rush for the Dardanelles.

When eventually one morning before daybreak the transports steamed out of Alexandria they made a line nearly eighteen miles long. The admiral at Mudros was advised by wireless. At Mudros and at Tenedos were stored thousands of tons of supplies. Every available warehouse was filled to the roof. Monster piles of boxes and bales extended along the beach. At once the work of loading hundreds of lighters, requisitioned from half the ports of the eastern Mediterranean, was pushed to completion.

A little less than forty-eight hours after it left Alexandria the fleet of transports, convoyed by a dozen battleships and half a hundred destroyers, passed Tenedos. Three hours later powerful tugs, towing long strings of lighters, steamed out of Tenedos and Mudros and fell into line many miles to the rear of the transport fleet.

Started at Daybreak.

Just at daybreak ten or twelve boats loaded to the gunwales with khaki clad soldiers wearing big tropical helmets put off from each transport to be the first to land on the tip of Gallipoli. Steam launches from the battleships towed the boats to shore in strings of five or six. It was three-quarters of a mile to shore.

Half the distance had been covered when a perfect hail of bullets and shrapnel splattered among the small boats. The men did not reply. They could see nothing to fire at.

The boats were run on to the beach. The men jumped out, ankle deep in water. They ran up the beach for seventy-five yards and threw themselves prone on the sand behind any little hummock they could find. Three or four men remained in each boat and poled it frantically back to the steam launch, which took it in tow.

Inconsistent.

One thing we have noticed is that the mother who likes to talk to the neighbors about the unfolding of her child's soul doesn't attend to his nose very well.—Columbus (O.) Journal.

IN LANDING AT AMAZES GREEKS

and headed for the transports for another load. Hour after hour men piled ashore from the transports. The line of disembarkment was more than a mile long.

The second detachment ran forty or fifty feet in advance of the first landing party before throwing themselves flat on the sand. The third party went the same distance in advance of the second, and so on.

At first the firing line was only a mile broad. It was gradually lengthened to cover the whole nose of the peninsula. Finally the line was more than two miles long.

The first detachment took terrible punishment. Dead and wounded were everywhere. The wounded had little show. There was no place to move them. They received rough first aid treatment and were dragged to the shelter of some small hills. They suffered greatly later in the day from the sun and heat. At the close of the day the medical corps got supplies ashore and erected temporary hospitals under the lee of a cliff.

Losses Were Terrible.

Every man was at last ashore, and an advance in open order was made. Slowly but surely the allies' army covered ground. The French had landed at Kum Kale, on the Asiatic side. That was only a trick to keep the Turks guessing as to where the real attack was to be made.

While the land forces were striving mightily to make their position secure the great battleships strung out from each end of the transport fleet thundered out fire and shell at a tremendous rate. The terrific bombardment and the vicious attacks of the Australian troops won the day. The Turks retreated behind their second line of defense. They left many dead and wounded on the field. They also lost many prisoners.

The British troops built rude breastworks and prepared to hold the captured ground at any cost. The first day's losses were terrible. More than 2,000 were dead.

When the position on Gallipoli peninsula became secure the big part of the disembarkment started. Great strings of lighters, piled high with all sorts of war materials, were beached. Thousands of sweating, swearing, half clad men toiled frantically in the hot afternoon sun. As accompaniment they had the cheerful music of a dozen or more battleships banging away at the Turk entrenchments.

Many Fell Exhausted.

At dark the men juggling supplies were relieved. It was time too. They were nearly done for. Most of them dropped exhausted in the warm sand. Also there had been some suffering because of the water. Empathic orders had been issued prohibiting men from drinking water from Turkish wells. All the water for the men came from the ships. The small boats were so occupied they had little time for water, consequently all the afternoon there was a constant cry for "water, water."

But the work did not stop. Thousands of fresh men leaped to relieve their exhausted comrades. At night half a hundred searchlights made the beach as light as day. The men worked in shifts. Toward morning the commissary got some portable kitchens ashore, and the men had breakfast.

The second day of the landing operations was, however, its real trial. From morning until dark 15,000 men worked to their utmost to get the last of the supplies ashore. Men struggled alternately with heavy siege guns and with barbed wire. The men at the front, frantically engaged in digging trenches, used up the barbed wire as fast as it could be taken to them. But the task was done.

Forty hours of terrible, life taking toll did it—that is, the time it took the British forces to land on the extremity of Gallipoli peninsula. It was really one of the remarkable incidents of the war. The operation was a marvel of perfection as to systematic preparation and execution. The Greek general staff had estimated that if the allies succeeded in landing at all the attempt would take them seven days.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—Hall Bonistelle, artist-photographer, preparing for the day's work in his studio, is reminded by Floide Fisher, his assistant, of a party he is to give in the studio that night, and warned that his business is in bad financial shape.

CHAPTER II—Mr. Doremus, secretary and justice of the peace, calls and informs Hall that his Uncle John's will has left him $4,000,000 on condition that he marry before his twenty-eighth birthday, which begins at midnight that night.

CHAPTER III—Mrs. Lora Royaton calls at the studio and Hall asks her to marry him at once. She spurs for time, but finally agrees to give him an answer at the party that night.

CHAPTER IV—Miss Carolyn Dallys calls and Hall proposes to her. She agrees to give him an answer at the party.

CHAPTER V—Rosamund Gale, artist-photographer, calls. Hall tries to rush her into an immediate marriage, but she, too, defers her answer until the evening. Floide says Hall has ordered trouble delivered at the house.

CHAPTER VI—Floide tries to show Hall a certain way out of the mixup, but he is obtuse. Jonas Hassingbury, heir to the millions in case Hall fails to marry on time, plots with Floide to break Hall's marriage to any of the three women before midnight.

CHAPTER VII.

After Jonas Hassingbury had left, Floide went to the telephone and called up a number.

"Mrs. Royaton— . . . Yes, this is Miss Fisher—at Mr. Bonistelle's, you know . . . about your pictures . . . Could you drop in this afternoon and see some proofs? . . . Oh, yes, lovely, I think . . . About three o'clock, if you will . . . Good-by!"

Next she called up Miss Dallys, and said nearly the same thing; both ladies agreed to call. But how about

"It's Hard to Ketch You Alone, You Know."

Rosamund? She wandered from studio to studio. Well, Floide must risk it. Perhaps she could be found later. Meanwhile she had much to do. She flew back to the printing room, and went to work on the negatives. They must all be finished before the ladies arrived, that they might suspect nothing. Quickly her fingers flew. Suddenly she looked up. Who was that in the office? Floide went in and found Alfred the Pale, with a big bunch of evergreen garlands. He pulled off his hat and grinned.

"Will I fix up the studio now?" he asked.

"Yes," said Floide, "right away." She held up a proof of Carolyn Dallys and inspected it critically. Alfred, meanwhile, was regarding his idol.

"Well, why don't you go ahead about it?" Floide inquired severely.

"Say, Miss Fisher," Alfred set down his bundle and approached her. "It's so hard to ketch you alone, you know—"

"No, I don't. We must have those decorations up in a hurry," Floide, however, did see something in the poor janitor's face which made her start hastily for the stockroom.

"Oh, I know it ain't no use, Miss Fisher, but I'll be a satisfaction even to be thrown down. It'll be something, anyway. I can't stand it any longer."

Floide stared at the hopeless janitor. Faint heart never won fair lady, but still, his look was flattering. There was a mild bloom in his devotion, as he fawned on her. It softened her heart.

"Now, Alfred," she began, "don't you be silly!"

"I just can't help it, Miss Fisher!" he exclaimed. "I got to be silly! If I didn't see you every day, here—oh, dear, ain't they any hope for me? Not never?"

He waited a moment, wistfully. Floide watched him with a curious far-away interest, as at an injured animal. Then she said gently, "It's not use, Alfred. You know I couldn't possibly. I don't want you to say another word about it." As she spoke, fingered a thin gold chain about her neck. Dangling, warm on her breast, was a tiny golden locket, one of Hall Bonistelle's few gifts, treasured jealously by Floide, worn night and day.

Alfred Smallish had already given up all hope. "Oh, I know," he said apathetically.

see how he could ever get along with out me."

"Well," Rosamund turned away scornfully. "I think he'll get along all right. The next offer you get, I advise you to take it. Hall may change his plans pretty soon, and you might be in the way."

Rosamund had led trumps, so Floide followed suit. She took her time, however, biting the end of her penholder thoughtfully. "I don't know but you're right, Miss Gale," she said finally. "perhaps I had better leave. You see, Mr. Bonistelle is likely to get married any time, you never can tell with a man like him—and I would be in the way, as you say." Rosamund's chin had risen an inch. Floide watched it, as she added, "It would be an awfully good thing for Mr. Bonistelle, too."

You see, his wife could keep the books and stay in the office, here, and he'd save by it; of course he wouldn't have to pay her any salary."

Rosamund's chin dropped. "Why, heavens! he wouldn't think of having his wife—"

"Oh, you don't know him," Floide did the airy fairy mood. "Besides, he couldn't afford to marry any other way."

"Why, I thought by the way he talked that he was doing a pretty good business."

"Well," Floide replied, with a fine frankness, "it's this way. You see, Mr. Bonistelle thinks he's doing a lot of business when he's not. He does a lot of work, I mean, but he takes so many pictures for nothing, it's worse than if he were idle."

"For nothing? How?"

"Why, the same as he did yours, exactly. And women do run after him so; you wouldn't believe how many! They're in here all the time."

Rosamund, by this time, didn't quite know where she was. Being herself a woman with a pliable conscience, she didn't altogether believe Floide, but she was not nearly so confident and determined as when she had entered. She had come in with the intention of accepting Hall Bonistelle; these hints of Floide's disturbed her mightily. She sat down and began to look over a pile of photographs, nervously.

Floide read her indecision, and, behind her account book, delighted in it. She had, however, little time to watch, before the door opened and Carolyn Dallys, trig and debonair, sauntered into the room.

Now here was a chin that was lifted naturally, with none of Rosamund Gale's affectation of superiority. Carolyn Dallys was sure of herself. It was much easier to fool her than to fool her. Her eyebrows were arched whimsically over her high-bred aquiline nose; her eyes always held a humorous spark.

"Oh, how d'you do! Thank you for telephoning me, Miss Fisher. I was so anxious to see those proofs, I ran right over," she drawled amiably at Floide, and smiled, in remembrance of their forenoon's encounter. She could hardly take anything seriously enough to bear resentment. Then she gave Rosamund a careless glance, modified only by that quality of interest which a brunette always gives her blonde-haired sister, and bowed slightly. Rosamund frankly stared.

"Mr. Bonistelle in?" Carolyn inquired carelessly.

Floide replied that he was away on important business, but that most of Miss Dallys' proofs were ready. Would she wait till the last two had been printed? In point of fact they had been done a half-hour ago, but for Floide's plan, Carolyn and Rosamund must be left alone together. It was her opening experiment in psychology. (Continued To-morrow.)

PARIS WAR SEERS FALL UNDER BAN

Too Many Women Were Seeking Aid of Clairvoyants.

NEW SWINDLES SPRING UP.

Soldiers in Trenches Made Excuses For All Sorts of Crimes, While Latest Amusement Is Writing Love Letters to Men at Front Just to Cheer Them on Battle Lines.

The happy days of fortune telling in Paris are over. Mediums, clairvoyants, astrologers, readers of palms and cards have now to make their living some other way.

The police found that too many women were spending their pitances in fortune telling parlors. So the ban has gone forth and in one week sixty-nine professors of occult knowledge were brought before the magistrates.

"What harm does it do?" they asked. "We always tell encouraging things. We always prophesy letters and good news. It keeps people cheered up and happy."

Many of them said their only sons, their husbands, were at the front. All source of revenue was cut off and they had to do something. But the court was obdurate and said the profession was entirely out of keeping with the seriousness of the times.

They Neatly Evade Law.

Some of them, however, continue to prophesy, but adhere strictly to the letter of the law in not giving any definite date. For instance, one of the best known of them told the fortune of a young actress in this neatly evasive way:

"You will receive a letter soon. I can't tell you exactly when. The police have forbidden me to."

And for that little phrase she asked $2.

In the Paris police courts many pathetic cases are seen. There are many which are due solely to the war, new professions and new crimes which have sprung up.

There are men with one leg who get a uniform and go around soliciting alms under the pretense that they lost the leg in the trenches. What scores of men and women up for theft, always say is:

"Your honor, I have a son in brother or perhaps a husband at the front. I know what he is suffering there in the trenches, and I couldn't resist the wish to send him something. Alas, I had no money, and that is why I committed this unpardonable act. But my love was stronger than my conscience."

Having heard this about twenty times one morning, one of the judges grew a little weary of it. When a woman came up accused of having given short weight in butter—only half of what she was being paid for, in fact—he said:

"Well, you, at any rate, can't make use of the argument that you were sending something to the trenches!"

She Had the Old Excuse.

"It comes to the same thing," the woman said calmly. "I have a friend in the trenches, and the morning this thing happened I got word that he was seriously wounded. I simply lost my head and didn't know what I was doing. That was why I didn't notice how much butter I was selling."

Every sort of charitable society has been formed in Paris since the war. There are those that concern themselves with the physical welfare of the soldiers and those of the moral and religious. But it remained for the Journal named Fantasio to launch the latest and evidently the most popular.

This new and novel organization is called the Society For the Fight at the Front and came into being through the letter of two sergeants to the Fantasio. In which they begged that paper to do something to provide them with a little of the tender sentiment of life as a relief from the strain of the trenches.

They were so worried, the soldiers said, with the continual masculinity of the trenches that they thought if some kind and thoughtful young ladies of Paris would only write them tender epistles they would feel cheered to take the offensive against the Germans.

Consequently the Fantasio has undertaken the work in all seriousness, forwarding such letters as are addressed to its care by modest maidens who do not wish to sign their real names and acting in return as a distributing postoffice for the effusions which come back from the soldiers.

AMERICAN BOYS IN WAR.

Parents Seek Bryan's Help to Get Lads Out of Foreign Armies.

The state department at Washington is now engaged in an effort to obtain the release of a number of American boys who enlisted in the European armies for service during the present war. Many of these are several years under the age of twenty-one. In all such cases the countries in whose service they enlisted are releasing them and sending them home at the instance of their parents.

Among the boys who enlisted were: Karl Llewellyn, L. E. Hartman and G. G. Tyrell of Chicago; Gilbert Lancaster of Dayton, Pa., and Charles O. Landon of Berrien Springs, Mich.

Be Pretty! Turn Gray Hair Dark

Try Grandmother's Old Favorite Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray; also ends dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is messy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy" you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe for about 50 cents.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy.

BRITISH SINK TURK GUNBOAT

Troop Ship Captured in Action in Persian Gulf.

1000 SOLDIERS SURRENDER

Advance Guard of Reinforcements Enter the Town and Are Taken Prisoners—2000 Others Hastily Retreat.

London, June 10.—The Turkish gunboat Marmaris has been sunk and the Turkish transport Mosul has been captured, according to an official statement given out by the British government.

The action took place in the Persian gulf region. The text of the statement follows:

"Fuller reports of our advance up the Tigris river and the occupation of Amara show that as the result of an action on May 31 and June 1 the enemy's force which had been threatening Kurnah for some time became completely demoralized.

"No resistance appears to have been offered to the small party pursuing by river, the Turks trying to escape as fast as they could in mahales and steamers. The former surrendered on being overtaken, while the Turkish gunboat Marmaris was sunk and the transport Mosul captured.

"Although the strength of the force which arrived at Amara in the Comet (British destroyer) and some small launches was quite insignificant, the entire garrison, including the Turkish civil governor of Amara, Halim Bey, the commandant of the force recently opposing us at Kurnah and Said Ullah, commandant of two fire brigade battalions surrendered.

"Shortly after our occupation of Amara the advanced guard troops of the Daghastani column, which had been retreating from the Kherka valley, entered the town and were captured. The remainder of this force, estimated at about 2000, fled, leaving a heavy gun in our hands.

"The remnants of the enemy, who so far have escaped capture, are retreating in a state of disorganization, many having discarded their arms."

The Turkish gunboat Marna is displaced 492 tons and carried a complement of sixty-six men. She was 174 feet long and was armed with four 9-pounders and two 1-pounders. She also was equipped with one torpedo tube.

BERLIN ARGUES FRYE CASE

Insists on Throwing Destruction of American Ship into Prize Court.

Berlin, June 10.—Germany has sent a note in reply to the representation of the American government regarding the American steamship William P. Frye, which was sunk by the German auxiliary cruiser Prinz Eitel Friedrich in January.

The note reiterates the original view taken by Germany, which was that the ship should be sent to a prize court.

The American government asked that compensation be paid for the destruction of the vessel, without waiting for a decision by the prize court, but Germany, although ready to indemnify the owners in any case, under the provisions of the German American treaty, holds as a general principle that, owing to the possibility that others than Americans have interests at stake, the prize courts should first pass on all cases.

FRANK DENIED CLEMENCY

Slayer of Mary Phagan Loses Appeal to Georgia Prison Commission.

Atlanta, Ga., June 10.—The Georgia prison commission declined to recommend to Governor Slaton a commutation of the death sentence of Leo M. Frank, convicted of the murder of Mary Phagan.

The commission decided against clemency by a vote of two to one. E. L. Rainey and R. E. Davidson voted against a recommendation for clemency and T. E. Patterson voted in favor of Frank.

The commission's decision is not binding on the governor, who, it was stated, would conduct further hearings before making his decision.

Frank is under sentence to be executed on June 22. The final decision of the state prison commission marks the end of a long fight by the prisoner to establish his innocence of the crime of which he is accused.

Postmasters Appointed.

Washington, June 10.—President Wilson named the following postmasters: Pennsylvania—M. J. Flynn, Emmenton; William H. Carter, Punxsutawney; John B. Henning, Tunkhannock; J. Richard Hancock, Williams-town, New Jersey—William E. Kasendyke, Haworth; Albert A. Slickley, Springfield.

ITALIANS HURL ARMY AT ENTRENCHED FOE

Make General Advance Against Trieste Defenders.

Rome, June 10.—Firmly posted on the left bank of the Isonzo in the upper reaches of that river, the Italian army is in touch with the Austrians north of Tolmino and a general attack on the Austrian positions south as far as Gradisca is believed to be under way.

Between Gradisca and the sea the Italians have crossed the river at several points under the fire of the enemy and have strongly entrenched themselves.

The heights back of Gradisca, which is the key to the entire frontier position of the Austrians, are known to have been strongly fortified and large forces of troops are posted there.

Severe fighting has been reported at Sagrado, just south of Gradisca, on the Isonzo. The railway to Trieste passes through Sagrado and if the Italians capture this town the important town of Monfalcone will be at their mercy.

The tri-color of Italy now waves from Caporetto, eight miles northwest of Tolmino, to Porto Buso, in the Gulf of Trieste.

In the high valley and rough mountain ridges near Caporetto the Italian guns for two days have been pounding away at the Austrians, who have burrowed into cover on the opposite slopes. Alert Italian snipers who crept forward far in advance of their artillery positions have been worrying the enemy night and day. The troops have gained ground which now enables them seriously to threaten Tolmino.

An Italian dirigible which made an attack on the port of Fiume caught fire and was lost. The crew is believed to have been saved and captured by the Austrians.

Still Bigger German Gun.

Berlin, June 10.—It is learned from a semi-official source that the Germans have introduced in the western theater of war a new gun of the biggest caliber ever known. It fires a 17-inch shell and has a range of twenty-five miles. One of these guns was recently used in the bombardment of Verdun.

The Result of a Caprice

By LOUISE B. CUMMINGS

"Auntie, why were you never married? I have heard that in your youth you were a great belle."

"My dear," replied the old lady, "why I was not married is a painful story to me. It has been constantly with me ever since I was nineteen years old, but I have never talked about it. There is a lesson in it for young girls like you, and on that account I will tell it to you."

Then the old lady told me the following story:

You know that I was born and raised in the south on one of those plantations that represented typical high life there before the war destroyed the institution which was its foundation. I came of age shortly before the struggle opened. I suppose it is true that I was a belle. Would that I had not been such, for the attention I received turned my head and caused what embittered my life.

Among my suitors were Alfred Beale and Edgar Turnee. Turnee was my favorite—indeed, I was very much in love with him—but I wished to be striven for and alternately encouraged him and his rival, Alfred Beale. One day I was sitting in the drawing room of the plantation house with Edgar. My back as well as his was toward the door opening into the great hall, while my face was toward a large mirror resting on the mantel over the fireplace. I caught a glimpse of the reflection of Alfred Beale in the hall.

He saw both Edgar and me sitting together. He paused and looked at us, making no sound to indicate to us that he was there. Indeed, he was eavesdropping, but I thought little of that. I was wrapt in the idea of being an object of strife between two young men and was tempted to see what would happen between them should I purposely increase their antagonism.

I had been expecting a proposal from Edgar and now gave him every encouragement. He was placing an arm around my waist and his face was near mine when I gave a little shriek and drew away from him, assuming to be indignant. Beale stepped into the room and, glaring at Edgar, upbraided him. Edgar looked an appeal to me to exonerate him.

It is impossible to give reasons for the freaks that enter the heads of young persons, especially young girls, in the matter of coquetry. Instead of taking the blame of Edgar's act upon myself, I walked out of the room, leaving my admirers to settle the controversy in their own way. I had no sooner left them than it occurred to me that I had acted abominably. If I had gone directly back and confessed the situation might have been saved. I was about to do so when I remembered that such an acknowledgment would bring down upon me the contempt of both men—that is, if it were believed, which I doubted.

While I was deliberating I heard both men go out of the house. I started to call them back, but hesitated, and before I had made up my mind what to do they were out of hearing.

I wondered what would come to pass between them. It did not occur to me that they would fight a duel. Duelling by this time had largely died out in the south, and I was too young to have heard much of an obsolete custom. What chiefly concerned me was that I had so deeply wronged the man I loved. I was not only suffering from consciousness of having done him an injustice, but was panic stricken lest he should never forgive me.

The affair began in the afternoon, and from then until bedtime I was in a state of dread, not that anything serious might occur between the rivals, but that I had lost my lover. In the middle of the night my father came into my room and asked me for an explanation of what had happened, for he had heard of it. Instead of telling him the truth, I left him with the impression that Edgar had transcended his rights and Alfred had resented his act. I asked father what had come of it, and he replied that I would learn the result in the morning; then he left me.

This was the first intimation I had of anything serious between the two men. Suddenly it flashed upon me that they would fight. I trembled. I lay turning the matter over in my brain, which was like a boiling caldron. With the first light of dawn I arose, dressed myself, stole down the great staircase and out on to the veranda. Looking out from behind a vine, I saw Edgar and two other young men riding by the plantation. Going to the barn, I saddled my horse, mounted and followed them.

I cannot dwell on the rest. It is too painful. I was some time in finding where they had gone. When I reached them they had fought a duel with pistols, and Alfred Beale was lying on the ground, while a surgeon was bending over him. I hurried to him to see if he were dead and was assured that his wound would not be fatal. I turned to Edgar. He gave me a look that has haunted me ever since. I saw in it that I had lost him forever.

You have heard my story. May it be a lesson to you that love is not a game for passing the time that young persons regard it. Love is a serious matter and should be treated seriously. Better the European method of matches made by parents than the follies committed by some young men and women when left to their own caprices.

W. G. Sharp, American Ambassador to France.

Although he has been in Paris since last September, William G. Sharp, American ambassador to France, has only recently secured a house in which to reside. The lease to the residence so long occupied by American ambassadors was given up before Mr. Sharp's arrival in Paris.

As representative of Uncle Sam to one of the belligerent nations Ambassador Sharp is called upon to solve many difficult and important problems. Matters of international import are constantly arising that call for the most careful consideration and adjustment.

When Mr. Sharp was appointed on June 12 to succeed Myron T. Herrick as ambassador to France, he was ranking member of the house committee on foreign affairs and had a general knowledge of international political affairs.

Like his predecessor, Ambassador Sharp is a native of Ohio. He was born in 1859 and has lived in Elyria since boyhood. He was educated in the common schools and was graduated in law from the University of Michigan in 1881. He practiced law for a time and was made prosecuting attorney for his county. Soon the future ambassador gave up the practice of law and engaged in the manufacture of pig iron and chemicals, in which business he acquired a large fortune. He was elected to membership in three congresses and was a delegate to various Democratic national conventions.

French Surgeon Checked In Work by Lack of Printed Forms.

One of the best known doctors, who is directing a French military hospital, recently had need of a certain surgical instrument. He wrote to the authorities for it.

"Make your request on a printed form," came the answer. The doctor replied that he had no printed forms. Second reply from the administration, "Make a demand for printed forms." The doctor again wrote and received a third reply, "Make your demand on a printed form."

Lamps of Ancient Times.

The most primitive lamps were probably the skulls of animals in which fat was burned, while certain sea shells were also employed for this purpose. When pottery and metal began to be used the principle of these natural lamps was for a long time retained, as seen in ancient Egyptian, Greek and Roman lamps, and in the stone cups and boxes of northern nations.

POPULAR MECHANICS

Speedometer For Speed Control.

Speedometers, as a rule, only tell the motorist when he is exceeding the speed limit. They do not prevent his doing so, says the Scientific American. On commercial motor vehicles the speed question is often of greater importance than that of overloading, and one of the large speedometer manufacturers has hit upon the happy idea of combining the indicator of speed with an arrangement that will prevent the driver from going faster than the device has been set for.

The device consists of a patent lock, which can be set at any desired speed from zero to sixty miles an hour. When the indicated speed is reached by the speedometer hand an electric contact is established which energizes a magnet contained in a small box through which the rod from the carburetor throttle passes. This rod is split within the case, and one end passes freely in a sleeve fitting tightly over the other end of the rod. Normally connection between the two is made by a pin that passes through an opening in the sleeve and free end of the rod. The closing of the electric contact when the speed limit is reached lifts this pin out of engagement and breaks the connection between the rod and the sleeve. The throttle thereupon closes slowly of its own weight, and no amount of manipulation of hand or foot control will be communicated to the carburetor. When the car has fallen below the speed limit, however, the speedometer contact is released, the magnet permits the pin to fall back into its place, and the throttle rod is continuous once more.

Securing Celluloid to Wood.

The best method is to scrape the wood and celluloid clean and then heat some grain alcohol to the boiling point. As alcohol boils at a relative low temperature and is very inflammable, it should be held at a considerable distance from the source of heat. When the alcohol has been warmed to the desired point it is applied to the under side of the celluloid with a small brush. The celluloid is then pressed down on the wooden strip to which it is to be secured and held tightly in place for about two minutes. It is said that nothing except fire will ever make the celluloid come off. The same method may be used for sticking celluloid to celluloid, celluloid to hard rubber and celluloid to glass.

Restoring Faded Writing.

To restore faded or effaced ink writing in old manuscripts, moisten the writing with freshly made "ammonio-bromide of ammonia" (SH. NH<sub>2</sub>), and in a few moments the letters become plainly visible. A fresh solution in water is colorless, but turns yellow quickly when exposed to air. The surplus chemical is removed by washing with cold water, and the paper is then dried by slight heating or with blotting paper. If the writing again fades after this treatment a tannin solution should be applied. This process is only useful for restoring ink made with gallic acid.—Popular Mechanics.

Life Saving Parachute.

A life saving parachute has been patented in which a device that may be worn as a garment, has a flexible overhanging and relatively wide skirt band secured to the body portion at a point near its upper end and beneath the arms of the wearer, and flexible stays are secured to the lower end of the body portion and to the outer edge of the overhanging band, so that as the wearer descends his downwardly extending legs will operate upon the stays to hold the band at its outer edges so the latter will expand and operate as a parachute.—Scientific American.
